"Did Stanford White ever call at the holise?" was asked.
"They said it was he, but I cannowsay for sure," replied the gentle spinster.
"The dear child and I went frequently to ball games and other blaces, and on several occasions she pointed out the rich architect. She feared Mr. White, the poor darling did.

In regard to the time Mr. White is reported to have sought to force his way into the house, Miss Pierce said:
"That was in December, 1904, but I am not sure it was he. Mehinks it much better for me to be at work on that day. He did not wear a mustache. Thee ought to know he was not welf-come. I am a Hicksite Quaker and most plain-spoken. Thee had better see the negro chambermaid who stopped the man at the door, and peace be with thee."

Miss Pierce was housekeeper for Evelyn Nesbit during the period between the former's ejection from the Horst Cumberland and her marriage, and she still very close to little Evelyn. She concluded:

"Ar. Harry's lawyers have been very anxious to identify a picture of Mr. White as the man I saw at the door trying to get in. They brought me a half dozen photographs, but I am sure that the caller had no muratache. Then men from the Berhoff Detective Sureau, of No. 1116 Broadway, have been watching my every step. I have been subpoenaed, both for the defense and the prosecution, but I can tell only one story." Intruder Was Persistent.
